Before reading

Ask one gentle question. Keep the tone calm and non-blaming.

- Have you ever made a mess by accident?
- What can make a mistake feel scary?
- What helps a friend feel better after something goes wrong?

During reading

Pause at these story moments.

- When Yok reaches for another brush: What do you notice about her tail?
- When the paint spills: What might Yok be feeling in her body?
- When Yok wants to hide: Why can mistakes make us feel small?
- When Yok says sorry: What words help repair the hurt or mess?
- When the splash becomes a flower: How did the friends make something new?

After reading

Choose one quick follow-up.

1. Tell it: Practice saying, “I knocked it over by accident.”
2. Sorry words: Practice, “I’m sorry. Are you okay?”
3. Help it: Pretend to clean a small spill together.
4. Make it new: Turn a scribble, splash, or dot into a flower.

Parent Conversation Card

After the Story: Talk About Fix-It Steps

Ask gently

1. What made Yok want to hide?
2. What did Yok say to Tom after the paint spilled?
3. How did Abby help Yok repair the mistake?
4. Why does a mistake not mean someone is bad?
5. What fix-it step could you try this week?

Practice together

Try the three fix-it steps. Keep the practice small and calm.

1. Tell

Say what happened.

2. Sorry

Say sorry for the hurt or mess.

3. Help

Clean, fix, or make something new.

Home activity: Make a tiny pretend spill with paper scraps or blocks. Practice saying what happened, saying sorry, and helping clean it up. Then draw a flower over a scribble to show how mistakes can become a next step.

Fix-It Steps Practice Cards

Cut out the cards. Practice one repair sentence or action at a time.

Children may point to a card, whisper, act it out, or say it aloud.

I made a mistake.

I can tell what happened.

I'm sorry.

Are you okay?

I can help clean.

Let's fix it together.

Can we make it new?

A mistake can change.

Thank you for helping.

Adult tip: The goal is repair, not shame. Help the child name what happened, care for the person or mess, and take one helpful next step.
